December 2015

I am excited to announce a unique panel discussion presented by the California Association of Clerks and Election Officials – “Re-Imagining Voting in California” – taking place Thursday, January 14, 2016 at 6:00 p.m. on the UCLA campus.

This panel discussion will steer clear of the oft-discussed voting machine issues and will instead focus on how technology in general might improve the process of voting. For instance, there has been progress made in some areas but can we do better? What if there were no barriers? What do voters expect – and how can the technological advances that surround us in our daily lives merge into improving the overall voting experience?

We'll also explore how the media views this topic – and what can be done in the short term versus the long term. It's exciting to move off of the “constraint” discussion and have a broader dialogue.

This event will be webcast live on CACEO's website, caceo58.org. Viewers are encouraged to join in the discussion using the hashtag #caceoimagine. We hope you will join us for this FREE - and what will sure to be - stimulating event!
